“Metadata” has been repeatedly in the headlines since the Snowden/NSA leaks last June. But lawyers have been wrestling with “metadata” issues since the 2006 amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure without fanfare. The relevancy of metadata in litigation, its functions, and its significance, will be the subject of a one and half hour program. We will look at metadata in the context of trade secret theft, social media, employment disputes, and other types of civil litigation.

Analyzing metadata – it’s not just for the NSA.
